

for the lad and his parents, among all who have heard of their plight.

The family's condition of abject poverty, the father and bread-winner, weak, wan, and unable to work, the mother bed-ridden, has excited the pity of philanthropic persons and it is likely that the several Hebrew societies of the city will start a public subscription to provide treatment for the boy at the Pasteur Institute in Baltimore, and for such small comforts as the pressing needs of the household demand.

This suggestion has been made by Samuel Einstein, the District Poundmaster, who was directed yesterday by the Health Officer to convey the unpleasant news to the father's family, as the lad is in danger of hydrophobia, and should receive immediately every care and attention within the reach of medical science.

Treat Rabies With Success In Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 22.—The Pasteur Institute, which is connected with the City Hospital, was founded by the College of Physicians and Surgeons about ten years ago, and no similar institution in the country has met with such signal success in the treatment of hydrophobia cases. Dr. N. G. Keirle, city post-mortem physician, has been connected with the institute since its inception, and it was due to experiments made by him in the treatment of rabies that the Pasteur department was made a feature of the hospital.

Several years prior to the establishment of the institute, Dr. Keirle had a laboratory at the City Hospital, where he carried on continuous experiments in cases of hydrophobia. Various animals, including rabbits and mice, were used in these experiments, and by this method Dr. Keirle got at the secret of the rabid and oftentimes fatal disease.

In order to produce rabies in a rabbit or chicken, it was necessary to trephine them, but with mice the same results could be obtained by means of hypodermic injection. Both treatments were resorted to by Dr. Keirle, and so successful was he in treating the animals and fowls for the dread disease, that he afterward began to extend the practice to human beings. The results obtained by the Pasteur treatment by Dr. Keirle since the foundation of the institute are well known.

Since the first year that it opened, close on to 1,000 cases have been treated, and during all the years that patients have been received, but one case has resulted fatally.

When a person is received at the institution, Dr. Keirle immediately endeavors to get possession of the animal by which the patient was bitten. The head of the canine undergoes a thorough examination by Dr. Keirle and his assistants, and he can determine in a short while whether the dog was suffering with hydrophobia at the time that the person was bitten.

The treatment at the institution covers a period of twenty-three days.

Rabbits Give Signs of Rabies In Three Days

Pathologists in the Bureau of Animal Industry will not be able to determine whether W. A. Engel's collie dog "Carlo" was suffering from the rabies until two or three days have elapsed.

Three rabbits have been inoculated with the culture taken from the supposed mad dog, which was shot and killed by Policeman Kleindienst Friday afternoon.

Dr. John R. Mohler, chief pathologist, has charge of inoculations at the bureau. He says the rabbits will begin to show signs of the malady within the next few days, if the dog was suffering from rabies. Rabbits are used in the experimental work because they are more like the human being than any other animal and the reaction is almost identical.

Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau, says he has received no report from the pathologists regarding the condition of the dog, and will not get one until a final determination is reached by Dr. Mohler.

W. A. Engel, of 235 New Jersey avenue northwest, said he would not have sold the dog for $10. He informed the police that some one stole the dog from his residence on Thursday night, and he was looking for the animal when informed "Carlo" had been shot and killed.

GLADSTONE'S AIDE SUCCEEDS BRYCE

DUBLIN, Dec. 22.—The Dublin Mail states that Sir Horace Plunkett, former secretary to Premier Gladstone, will be invited to enter the cabinet as the successor to the new ambassador to the United States, Mr. Bryce, who surrenders the position of secretary of state for Ireland.

MAGNETIC SURVEY YACHT BEGINS THIRD CRUISE

The magnetic survey yacht, in the employ of the department of terrestrial magnetism of the Carnegie Institution, of Washington, left San Diego, Cal., yesterday to enter upon her third cruise, which will extend to the end of the year 1907.

This vessel in the prosecution of the magnetic survey of the Pacific ocean has already obtained results of great importance. It is expected that revised charts of the lines of equal magnetic variation for the Pacific ocean can shortly be issued.

The yacht is commanded by W. J. Peters, of this city.

DEATH OF ORATORY.

Painful self-consciousness bids us flee the vocal clarity of who in English estimation is scarcely removed from the quack. There was a time when a false quantity in a classic quotation would mean the prospect of a rising parliamentarian, but now the floor of St. Stephen's is strewn with aspirates. Oratory is dead.—Times of India, Bombay.

CZAR'S FRIEND SHOT TO DEATH BY TERRORIST

Hated Count, Trepoff's Ally, Riddled by Desperate Red.

TSAR, Russia, Dec. 22.—Gen. Count Alexis Pavlovich Ignatieff, a member of the council of the empire, ex-governor general of Kiev, Volnia, and Podolia, and one of the most hated men in Russia, fell a victim to the vengeance of a terrorist as he strode across the refreshment hall of the nooks' assembly this evening.

The general entered the assembly just at dusk, and was walking across to his table when a young man, dressed in the uniform of an officer of the guards, started over as though to greet him. As he saluted with his right hand, the newcomer pulled an automatic revolver from inside of the breast of his tunic and fired six bullets into the general, riddling his chest.

Tried to Defend Self.

At the sound of the first shot Count Ignatieff drew his own revolver, but the concussion of the first wound disconcerted his aim, and he fired but once, the bullet clipping the chandelier in the center of the hall. His revolver then dropped from his nervous hand as he fell in the center of the building.

Attendants frustrated an attempt by the assassin to kill himself, and he was very badly beaten before finally being overpowered and turned over to the police.

General Ignatieff was born in 1842 and after completing the usual course in the corps of pages entered a regiment of hussars of the guard. In 1883 he was appointed commander of the regiment of Chevalier Guards, the most coveted post in the Russian army, and in 1881 he became chief of staff of the Guard Corps. He entered the administrative service in 1885 as governor general of Irkutsk, and in 1889 was recalled to St. Petersburg to become assistant minister of the interior. While on the train en route to the capital, he was appointed general of Kiev, which position he held until 1897.

Influenced the Czar.

As a result of the "Red Sunday" disorders, Ignatieff was sent by the emperor to investigate the situation in Southern Russia. His report on the immediate necessity for granting reforms induced the Czar to proclaim the first parliament.

During the debates preceding the adoption of the parliamentary law of August 6, 1905, Ignatieff advocated granting large measure of power to parliament, but it appears success of the repressive measures following the Moscow revolt changed his opinion, for he became the active conductor of General Trepoff in supporting the repressive policy of Durnovo, and in the intrigue which resulted in the downfall of Witte.

It was said the plan was to proclaim Ignatieff premier and dictator, turn his guard regiments against parliament when it had assembled and supply the iron rule which Trepoff and Ignatieff considered to be the sole thing lacking to govern Russia successfully under the old absolutism.

BELL LIKE A BOOK ON CUBAN AFFAIRS

General Expected Back From the Island Loaded Down With Information.

When Brig. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the army and temporarily in command of the Army of Cuban Pacification, returns to his regular duties in this city early in January, it is expected by the President and Secretary of War that he will be thoroughly conversant with conditions in the island and competent to conduct the operations in Cuba, in a general way, from the home office.

While Brig. Gen. Theodore Wint, in whom the President is known to have complete confidence, will succeed General Bell in active command of the situation, the experience of the chief of staff and the information he gained at first hand, following on the footsteps of Secretary Taft in Havana, is expected to be of great value to the Administration.

General Bell also is expected to return with information which will prove a benefit to the House of Representatives. When the House or Senate asks about things in Cuba, General Bell will pick up his note book and take a run up to the Capitol.

Roosevelt Blames Speech of Foraker

rather outweighing the presumption that the deed was done by one of the incensed soldiers.

Race Hatred Cause.

But this, it was further suggested by supporters of the President's position, is not a material point. These were disposed strongly to maintain, with the President, that race hatred and animosity, aroused against the officers of the battalion as a result of the troubles at Brownsville and the acid discussions since, might have inspired some other than a member of either company to do the shooting. No trace of the would-be assassin had been secured at last; accounts from Fort Reno.

Public men who were approached about the President's latest expression on the case were not disposed to talk last evening. They preferred to await developments. The case has developed a curious line of division in the Senate, where the Democrats in general have been opposed to any investigation, agitation, or interference with the operation of the President's order. There have been maintained that agitation on whatever pretext, could only produce further ill-feeling, increased friction between the races in the regions where race feeling is bitter and menacing, and no possible benefits. Thus it has come about that the Democrats generally have been aligned, along with administration Republicans, on the side of the President.

Foraker Leads Attack.

Senator Foraker has taken the lead in the determined effort to secure a Congressional investigation of the whole Brownsville affair. His speech in the Senate Thursday was a bitter arraignment of the President's course through the matter. He vigorously denied that there had been shown any justification for the discharge of the three companies. He analyzed the evidence which the President had sent to the Senate, and declared that instead of "scores of eyewitnesses," as the President had said in his message on the subject, in fact only eight people had even claimed to give the testimony of eyewitnesses. And, taking up the testimony of these eight in detail, he undertook to show that it was entirely inadequate and insufficient to justify such procedure as the Executive had taken.

Some of the Senator's allusions to the President were sharp and personal. He displayed great emotion at times, especially when he denounced the President as a great crime against justice, in the treatment of the discharged troops.

Speculation is already busy with the question of what will take place next in the affair, which has been growing more and more serious from the very beginning.

Await Purdy Report.

Mr. Purdy's report will be awaited with the utmost interest. It will probably be ready before Congress convenes after the recess, and the understanding is that it will be made public without delay. The President proposes to give the Senatorial critics plenty of investigation.

That the further discussion, when it is renewed after the holidays, in the Senate will be followed with even livelier interest than has thus far attached to it, is not questioned. Army men take hardly more interest in the matter than the politicians. One of them said that, having some knowledge of the conditions in the pacified region of Texas, he thought a thorough investigation there would throw some light on the public opinion of that section.

"It would be unsafe to take the word of any white man in that region where a colored man was involved," he declared vigorously.

And he indicated the opinion that full inquiry would show that the testimony that had been accepted against the colored troops would bear looking into. The President plainly has complete confidence that his vindication will be in proportion to the completeness of inquiry.

Soldier Shot The Captain, Say Parents

That the attempt to assassinate Capt. Edgar B. Macklin, of Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, was made by a discharged negro soldier for revenge is the expressed belief of Brig. Gen. James E. Macklin, retired, father of the young officer, as well as of many of the officials of the War Department.

They cling to this view, notwithstanding a dispatch from Colonel Penrose, commandant at Fort Reno, where the attempted assassination occurred Friday night, which was received at the War Department late yesterday afternoon. In the dispatch Colonel Penrose strengthens the impression conveyed in his first dispatch yesterday morning, when he stated that robbery was the purpose of the attack.

In his second message Major Penrose states that investigation shows the act was not that of any member of the command.

Captain Macklin, who, with Mrs. Macklin, has recently taken quarters at the Farragut, in this city, yesterday morning received information of the shooting in a telegram from Major Penrose. Both left the city at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the bedside of their wounded son.

Macklin Singled Out.

Immediately upon receiving his telegram yesterday morning, General Macklin called at the War Department, hoping for further particulars. He was accompanied by his only other son, Colonel Macklin, of Baltimore, formerly an officer in the Marine Corps and now commanding a regiment of Maryland militia.

General Macklin, explaining his belief that his son was shot by a discharged soldier, cites that Gilchrist Stewart, of the Constitutional League, in the report of his investigation, stated that Captain Macklin was the only officer of the three companies implicated who believed that the discharged soldiers were guilty and deserved the drastic action taken by the War Department by direction of the President.

Many officials of the department agree with this view. They also point out that while Major Penrose declared his belief that the deed was not committed by a "member of the Twenty-fifth," it might easily have been the work of one of the discharged soldiers. When the soldiers were dismissed they were instructed to leave the reservation and its immediate vicinity, but one of them might have returned for the purpose of committing the assault.

Had Company's Funds.

Openly, the officials prefer to take the view that robbery was the motive, and in support of this they cite that Captain Macklin was in charge of the company's funds and might have been supposed to have quite a sum of money in his possession.

Captain Macklin is known as one of the most popular officers in his regiment, and is well known in Washington, where he has often visited while on leave. He entered the Twenty-fifth as a private, and served as a private and non-commissioned officer till 1896. In the Spanish war he was appointed a second lieutenant, reaching the grade of captain in 1904. He has been assigned to the Twenty-fifth Infantry since December of that year.

Bloodhounds Quit Trail of Fugitive; Macklin Improves

EL RENO, Okla., Dec. 22.—The motive as well as the identity of the person who attempted to assassinate Capt. Edgar B. Macklin, of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, last night in his home here has not developed. Late this afternoon the bloodhounds that had been brought from Oklahoma City in an effort to trail down the would-be assassin, were returned to their owner, having accomplished nothing.

They took a trail at the place where the shot was fired and went directly to the railroad station, back tracked, and then seemed to lose out. It was apparent from the way the dogs worked that the fugitive must have boarded a train and left the city, or else, possibly, they were on the wrong scent.

Captain Macklin is resting easily tonight and will probably recover.

Defi to Foraker By Texas Ranger; Wants to Test fy

FORT WORTH, Tex., Dec. 22.—Capt. W. J. McDonald, of the State Rangers, who figured in an effort to ferret out the negro soldiers implicated in the Brownsville affair, says:

"I will go forty miles out of my way to give Senator Foraker an opportunity to cross-question me. Nothing will give me greater pleasure, and I offer the chance I will not only tell him who the Texas Rangers are, but will give him a little information on the conduct of the negroes, for whom he has exhibited so pronounced a liking."

"The chief purpose of the ranger is to protect innocent people from attack by such men as Senator Foraker upholds and defends on the floor of the Senate."

"If the Senator cross-questions me, I would delight in telling him all I know of the affair as I told the President in a letter written him last month. The President is a trump and I believe he will exercise greater determination on account of the antagonism of certain leading Senators."

NOTICE TO HORSE OWNERS.—At this season of the year when men and women are wearing warmer clothing and sitting in heated rooms, or if they go out, putting on overcoats and furs, it is the custom with certain thoughtful persons to cut from their horses the longer warmer coats which nature provides in winter.

The Humane Society will do what it can for the protection of these outraged, denuded horses. A blanket is a poor substitute for the natural coat. It affords no protection for the chest, neck, throat, and legs. Those who clip their horses and substitute blankets will better buy very good blankets this winter and use them all the time.
